

The Department of Radiology Presents:

Clinical Imaging Symposium in Nevis

Sponsored by the NYU Post-Graduate Medical School

January 27 – 31, 2014

General Information

Target Audience

This course is designed for clinical radiologists in academic or private practice.

Statement of Need/Course Description

There are many recent technological advances in imaging techniques and protocols which can be applied to current clinical practice. Maintenance of certification requires continued review of essential imaging techniques in all areas of radiology, including breast, musculoskeletal, PET/MRI, neuroradiology and thoracic imaging. This course is designed to demonstrate a practical approach to image acquisition and interpretation in various clinical settings using current up-to-date imaging techniques. The lectures will update attendees on improving diagnostic accuracy of CT imaging while decreasing patient radiation dose, interpreting and managing subsolid nodules, as well as advances in spine imaging and imaging of brain tumors. In addition to didactic lectures, several case-based sessions will also be included to cover breast MRI/US, small airway disease, imaging soft tissue tumors and imaging transverse myelitis.

Learning Objectives

- Describe the advances in brain tumor imaging, especially Dynamic-susceptibility (DSC) perfusion imaging, its physics and its role in distinguishing tumor recurrence from treatment induced change.
- Determine how best to incorporate the recent CT advancements that improve diagnostic accuracy and decrease patient radiation dose when evaluating patients with suspected pulmonary embolism.
- Describe the latest published data regarding breast density and its effect on screening mammography and screening breast ultrasound.
- Evaluate the new technology of PET MRI, and how its evolving applications, limitations, and pitfalls in interpretation is critical in appropriately recommending and utilizing this emerging technology.

About Nevis

Southeast of Puerto Rico and St Kitts, and west of Antigua, Nevis is the island home of Alexander Hamilton, one of America's founding fathers. Take the friendliest attributes of a small town and drop them on one of the most beautiful islands in the Caribbean, and you have Nevis. You will see majestic ruins of the sugar mills that once were the sole basis of the economy, almond trees bursting with nuts and cricketers taking to public fields in their whites. Local law prohibits buildings higher than the palm trees and visitors can explore and dine at preserved plantation homes that once anchored the sugar-cane industry. The island's charms include its many breathtaking beaches, especially Pinney's, a bright white stretch over three miles long. The island's Robert Trent Jones Jr.-designed golf course is consistently ranked among the Caribbean's very best, and showcases the island's dramatic scenery.

Optional Group Activities

Information regarding activities including: snorkeling, sunset cruise, tour of Nevis, cooking demos, golf tournaments, sailing /kayaking tours and much more will be posted on the NYU website.
