Conference Objectives

Women's Health Symposium: All About Me: Translating Knowledge to Wellness

is designed to help community healthcare providers learn more about issues affecting Asian American women living in New York City. Topics will include HIV/AIDS, breast cancer, human papillomavirus (HPV) and cervical cancer, cardiovascular disease, and mental health. We will also have a panel discussion geared towards assisting caregivers on how to advocate for children.

In our ongoing effort to represent the health concerns of Asian American populations such as Chinese, Korean, South Asian and Filipinos, Vietnamese and others, we have identified speakers whose outreach efforts within a particular community has reached success. We hope their shared insight will inspire a lively dialogue on how we can continue to build on maximizing the health care of Asian Americans.

We invite health care professionals, health educators, social service providers, students and individuals from the community to attend this symposium. In addition, we encourage everyone to bring their business cards, as we will provide the opportunity for networking.

Following the conclusion of this symposium, participants will have:

- An increased awareness of health issues that affect Asian American women, as well as health issues that are more prominent in one population versus another;
- Suggestions on how to empower women when it comes to health care and in advocating for their children;
- Feedback as to what methods and techniques worked or didn't work in a women's road to wellness.
