

Department of
Obstetrics and Gynecology

Obstetrics & Gynecology Residents and Alumni

First Year Residents

Class of 2027

Geidily Beaton Mata, MD

Hometown: Queens, NY

Medical school: CUNY School of Medicine

Areas of interest: Maternal Mortality, Minimally Invasive Surgery and Urogynecology

Hobbies: I enjoy being active whether dancing or going to the gym. I also enjoy planning dates with friends that include convos over brunch, going to see movies at parks, and going to concerts. Netflix is a must on a calm, relaxing day. Lastly, I LOVE blasting Bad Bunny while I clean!

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU because of its diverse exposure to different populations, and hospital systems. I felt that the institution met my needs of treating vulnerable people and benefitting from strong training. The vibrant, caring group of residents who prioritize quality of life is just the icing on the cake!

Amy Bleasdale, MD

Hometown: Portage, Michigan

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: Reproductive Justice and Advocacy, Perinatal Substance Use and Mental Health, Family Planning, Maternal-Fetal-Medicine

Hobbies: singing, cooking, growing my house plant collection, running, hearing live music, and finding new vegan restaurants to try!

Why I chose NYU Langone: As a medical student at NYU, I really admired the department's commitment to education, mentorship, and wellness. Additionally, I deeply respected the advocacy and patient care provided at Bellevue, and knew it would be an incredible privilege to continue training there. Moreover, the program offers unparalleled diversity of clinical sites and patient populations, which will help me become a well-rounded generalist, while also giving me the chance to explore subspecialty interests.

Theresa Christensen, MD

Hometown: Princeton, New Jersey

Medical school: Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania

Areas of interest: Family Planning, Reproductive Justice, Bioethics, Health Policy, Gender-Affirming Care

Hobbies: reading, rock climbing, yoga, weight lifting, and time with friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU for its program-wide focus on health equity. I feel so lucky to get to train in a city as diverse as New York, especially at Bellevue which cares for all patients with dignity, respect, and the highest quality of care regardless of their insurance status or country of origin. Additionally, I was impressed on my interview day by the clear culture of support in the residency program, and the dedication to fostering wellness and community while still achieving the highest level of training.

First Year Residents

Class of 2027

Cody Goldberger, MD

Hometown: New York, New York

Medical school: Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai

Areas of interest: Maternal-Fetal Medicine, Reproductive Justice, Medical Education, and Global Health

Hobbies: reading, knitting, crossword puzzles, seeing Broadway shows, spending time with friends and family

Why I chose NYU Langone: The people! I could tell immediately that the program fosters a supportive culture comprised of passionate and empathetic residents and faculty. I knew NYU would provide me with comprehensive and robust training spanning three different hospital landscapes, a breadth of clinical experiences, and diverse patient populations. I'm honored to serve patients from all three hospitals and thankful for the privilege of receiving my training here.

Hannah Karpel, MD

Hometown: Louisville, Colorado

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: Gynecologic Oncology, Urogynecology, Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology, advocacy as an OBGYN

Hobbies: hiking, skiing, reading, travel, NYT games

Why I chose NYU Langone: As a medical student here, I had the opportunity to witness the supportive and familial atmosphere of the residency program coupled with incredible and robust training at three hospitals, amazing mentors, and endless opportunities. I was confident that this close-knit environment would be ideal for me to learn, to grow as a resident and to receive the most comprehensive training.

Victoria Li, MD

Hometown: Santa Clara, California

Medical school: Keck School of Medicine at USC

Areas of interest: maternal-fetal medicine, fetal surgery, pediatric and adolescent gynecology, bioethics, and reproductive justice

Hobbies: cooking and baking, collecting vintage jewelry, starting DIY projects I don't finish, and overwatering my plants

Why I chose NYU Langone: I was first drawn to NYU for the opportunity to train at Bellevue and serve a county population while backed by an academic powerhouse's incredible infrastructure and research. During my visiting sub-internship, I was floored by how much I could learn in this diverse, fast-paced environment and by the enthusiastic support I received from faculty and residents. I am thrilled to train here and fulfill my lifelong dream of living in New York City!!

First Year Residents

Class of 2027

Keizra Mecklai, MD

Hometown: Sacramento, CA

Medical school: Harvard Medical School

Areas of interest: I am undecided, but so far I love gynecologic surgery, GynOnc, and general OBGYN

Hobbies: Traveling, Thrifting, Dinner Parties (but I delegate cooking to my husband!), going to Broadway shows, Reading, and rewatching 30 Rock

Why I chose NYU Langone: I knew I wanted to be in NY to be closer to my sister and my husband's family. NYU just stole my heart! The residents love and protect each other, making residency not only survivable but also fun. I also knew that training at Bellevue, a hospital dedicated to the health of all people, no matter their backgrounds, would be the privilege of a lifetime. I know that coupling that training with training at Tisch and Brooklyn will make me an unbelievably capable and well-rounded doctor and surgeon.

Amanda Nwaba, MD

Hometown: Woodbine, Maryland

Medical school: University of Miami

Areas of interest: I love it all! MFM & ultrasound, Gynonc, robots(!), advocacy, health education, medical humanities

Hobbies: cooking and baking, anything music related, taking walks and exploring, playing tennis, reading, trying anything crafty

Why I chose NYU Langone: Everyone I spoke to shared a genuine devotion to their patients and community and a passion for their work. It was also important for me to be close to my family and in a city. I look forward to living and working in New York City in a program sincerely committed to resident wellness. NYU also has an extensive, diverse program with a strong sense of community and supportive mentors, and I'm so grateful for the opportunity to train here.

Paxton Voigt, MD

Hometown: Darien, CT

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: general practice, global health, reproductive endocrinology and infertility, health disparities, and advocacy

Hobbies: Workout classes, running in Central Park, eating (especially out at restaurants in NYC), hosting dinner parties, hiking (only when the weather is good), and traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: NYU is where I fell in love with OBGYN because of the people and the patients. The residents are a family that's impossible to not want to be a part of; the attendings and staff are so incredibly supportive and inspirational; and the diversity of patients we get the privilege of caring for together made me confident that I wanted to stay for residency.

First Year Residents

Class of 2027

Linda Zambrano Guevara, MD

Hometown: Hampton Bays, New York

Medical school: Duke University School of Medicine

Areas of interest: gynecologic surgery, oncology, medical education, health disparities and advocacy

Hobbies: cycling, cooking, spending time with friends and family

Why I chose NYU Langone: The extraordinary training, range of experiences between hospitals, diverse patient population, and privilege of getting to practice at Bellevue all drew me to NYU Langone. The close, fun-loving, and supportive community sealed the deal.

Second Year Residents

Class of 2026

Diana Abbas, MD

Hometown: Cambridge, Massachusetts

Medical school: Boston University School of Medicine

Areas of interest: maternal–fetal medicine, family planning, global health, and medical education

Hobbies: running, swimming, cooking, and yoga

Why I chose NYU Langone: The opportunity to work in three different hospital settings stood out to me. I wanted a place where I could learn to care for everyone in every setting and where I was around people who also wanted the same. It was reassuring on interview day when all residents and faculty talked about how intentionally they chose NYU Langone for this reason. Above all, working with a justice and equity framework is an essential part of the culture of learning and teaching.

Gabrielle Concepcion, MD

Hometown: Bronx, New York

Medical school: Albert Einstein College of Medicine

Areas of interest: maternal–fetal medicine, disparities in healthcare and access to care; I'm keeping my options open

Hobbies: baking and also eating desserts, making beeswax candles, traveling, trying new things, and spending time with my family, friends, and pets

Why I chose NYU Langone: I was completely swept off my feet during my interview, and for the rest of the week I could not stop thinking about my experience and the interactions I had. I chose NYU Langone because of the diversity of clinical experiences it offers, as well as the privilege of training at Bellevue. I aspired to train at a place where diversity is valued and where there is a strong support system, and I definitely found that here.

Elise Heisler, MD

Hometown: Chicago, Illinois

Medical school: Loyola University Chicago Stritch School of Medicine

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology and infertility, oncofertility, maternal–fetal medicine, and medical education

Hobbies: hiking, traveling/adventuring national parks, tennis, ice cream, making kombucha, and all things dogs

Why I chose NYU Langone: I did an MS4 visiting student rotation here and was taken aback by how friendly, warm, talented, and committed all the residents and faculty were. They immediately made me feel like part of the team, and I knew I wanted to be part of the NYU family. Between Bellevue, Tisch Hospital, and NYU Langone Hospital—Brooklyn, residents graduate with a breadth of experiences caring for patients who represent the diversity of New York City. I feel so lucky to be part of this wonderful community.

Second Year Residents

Class of 2026

Namita Kansal, MD

Hometown: Vienna, Virginia

Medical school: Duke University School of Medicine

Areas of interest: maternal health disparities, maternal–fetal medicine, family planning, and medical education

Hobbies: traveling, dancing, happy hours, karaoke, all things Bollywood, and cheering on my Blue Devils

Why I chose NYU Langone: It was a no-brainer for me because of the people. Everyone I talked to was so welcoming, happy, and warm. It was exactly the type of family and culture I wanted to join. Learning alongside and from these amazing people while also training at the three diverse and special hospitals so unique to NYU Langone is just a dream come true.

Katie Kwon, MD

Hometown: Ellicott City, Maryland

Medical school: Lewis Katz School of Medicine at Temple University

Areas of interest: gynecologic surgery, medical education, and health disparities and advocacy

Hobbies: exercising, bouldering, brewery and winery tastings, brewing kombucha, new restaurants, anything food/beverage related brings me joy

Why I chose NYU Langone: When I was pre-med, I volunteered at Bellevue and have dreamt of serving this population ever since. NYU Langone provides the opportunity to train at Bellevue, Tisch, and NYU Langone—Brooklyn, one of the most diverse training opportunities I've encountered. It was vital for me to work with different patient populations. The support I received from the faculty and the opportunities for career development made choosing NYU one of the easiest decisions to make.

Dominique Noriega, MD

Hometown: Manchester, Massachusetts

Medical school: SUNY Downstate Health Sciences University

Areas of interest: everything, particularly human rights via health equity, reproductive justice, and medical education

Hobbies: reading, rock climbing, and crocheting

Why I chose NYU Langone: In a residency program, I was looking for clinical and academic rigor within a supportive culture as well as an opportunity to better understand the healthcare structures in New York City. I found all that and more at NYU Langone. I was beyond impressed by the breadth and depth of training at the three different sites, especially the opportunity to serve the diverse patient population at Bellevue alongside such warm and inspiring colleagues.

Second Year Residents

Class of 2026

Alexandra Pass, MD

Hometown: Bronxville, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: everything—I'm excited to continue to explore the full breadth of this amazing field during residency

Hobbies: listening to podcasts, cycling on my indoor bike, walking around Central Park, exploring new restaurants with family and friends, and traveling whenever and wherever I can

Why I chose NYU Langone: Early on, I knew that the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology was special. I was able to witness firsthand the true sense of camaraderie between residents, the devoted mentorship from faculty, and the unmatched training experience afforded by practicing at three unique institutions: Bellevue, Tisch Hospital, and NYU Langone Hospital—Brooklyn. I'm honored to train among individuals who I admire.

Tatiana Petrovick, MD

Hometown: Barre, Massachusetts

Medical school: University of Massachusetts

Areas of interest: global health, family planning, and ultrasound

Hobbies: reading sci-fi and fantasy books, fitness, thrift shopping, and trying new cheeses

Why I chose NYU Langone: From the very beginning of my residency application process, I knew that NYU Langone checked all of my boxes: an academic program with strong research, faculty committed to health equity and working with medically underserved populations. When I interviewed here, it was clear that everyone is passionate about what they do. I chose NYU Langone because I want to work with the culturally and socioeconomically diverse patient population at Bellevue and start my medical career in a place that supports me personally and professionally.

Cibela Quinteros, MD

Hometown: Santa Cruz, California

Medical school: Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons

Areas of interest: general obstetrics and gynecology, family planning, and global health

Hobbies: biking, traveling, painting, ceramics, and yoga

Why I chose NYU Langone: It provided the perfect combination of robust training in a supportive environment. The different hospitals offered the opportunity to treat and learn from many different patient demographics. The residents and faculty are welcoming and dedicated to supporting each other and providing fantastic patient care.

Second Year Residents

Class of 2026

Jenna Reich, MD

Hometown: Westchester, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology, assisted reproductive technology, and adolescent health

Hobbies: spending time with family and friends, walking my dog Maggie in Central Park, Pilates, and vanilla soft-serve ice cream

Why I chose NYU Langone: Having gone here for medical school, I knew what a supportive environment NYU Langone would provide. The familial atmosphere and positive interactions with the residents and attendings I had gotten to know really stood out and made me confident that I would feel comfortable and confident in this learning environment. I also love working in Bellevue and think that the experience is truly unique within New York City.

Third Year Residents

Class of 2025

Skyler Finning, MD

Hometown: Rockland County, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: general obstetrics and gynecology, reproductive endocrinology and infertility, and adolescent gynecology

Hobbies: running, high-intensity interval training (HIIT), baking, do-it-yourself projects, and finding new New York City restaurants to try

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU Langone because of the people. Having gone to medical school at NYU Grossman School of Medicine, I had the opportunity to see how devoted the faculty are to resident education and professional development. The residents seemed to truly enjoy one another's company and were clearly well equipped and supported to handle a busy labor floor or complicated gynecologic case. And, of course, New York City can't be beat in terms of the breadth of culture, food, & activities.

Adam Hunter, MD

Hometown: Wilmington, North Carolina

Medical school: University of North Carolina School of Medicine

Areas of interest: general obstetrics and gynecology, global women's health, maternal-fetal medicine, and gender-affirming care

Hobbies: running, swimming, reading, ceramics, and traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: I'm thrilled to train as an OBGYN within a dynamic system of hospitals whose patients comprise a microcosm of the world. During interview season, I was inspired by the legacy of Bellevue Hospital's excellence in treating New Yorkers and visitors alike with dignity, regardless of primary language or ability to pay. The faculty's genuine attention to nurturing well-rounded physician-advocates is evident in current and past residents' engagements and accomplishments. Living in New York City keeps life exciting both inside and outside of the hospital.

Aarti Kumar, MD

Hometown: Mason, OH

Medical school: University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine

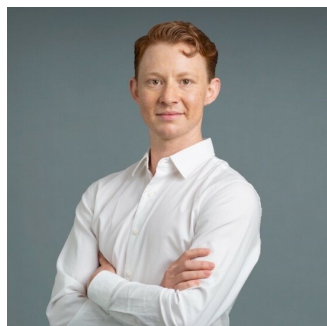

Areas of interest: maternal mortality, disparities in access to care, and quality improvement

Hobbies: making breakfast sandwiches, planning social events, ClassPass, and dancing (coordinated and uncoordinated)

Why I chose NYU Langone: It was empowering to hear everyone describe the strong infrastructure of support that defines the OBGYN department. This residency program pairs rigorous clinical training with a supportive environment, a hard balance to find. I felt motivated by the way the program encourages individual perspectives, values caring for a diverse patient population, and most importantly has the overall esprit de corps that so clearly defines my energy and passion for women's health.

Third Year Residents

Class of 2025

Pip Lipkin, MD

Hometown: Aspen, Colorado

Medical school: The Warren Alpert Medical School at Brown University

Areas of interest: Expanding access to quality obstetrics and gynecologic care for transgender and gender diverse (TGD) individuals, and the opportunity to support patients and destigmatizing these conversations

Hobbies: surfing, basketball, skiing, tennis, rock climbing, photography, and reading fiction and memoirs

Why I chose NYU Langone: Choosing NYU Langone was a no-brainer—I walked out of the interview and knew it would be an honor to train here. I was floored from conversations with residents and attendings by how genuinely happy, warm, and community-oriented this program is. At the structural level I was excited by the opportunity to train at three distinct clinical sites and with experts across the subspecialties.

Naaman Mehta, MD

Hometown: Buena Vista, Virginia

Medical school: Brown University

Areas of interest: global women's health, gynecologic oncology (and disparities in care within gynecologic oncology), pediatric and adolescent gynecology, and communications and advocacy as an OBGYN

Hobbies: trying new restaurants, traveling, spending time with friends and family, spinning, yoga, Reggaeton, Bollywood, languages, and coffee

Why I chose NYU Langone: Definitely the people and the culture: every single resident and attending I met on my interview day was so kind and genuinely excited to welcome us and get to know us as individuals. I truly felt as if my story was heard, and that I would be supported by the NYU Langone family. I was drawn to everyone's commitment to going above and beyond for every single patient, particularly Bellevue's population.

Amma Ntoso, MD

Hometown: Wyncote, Pennsylvania

Medical school: Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons

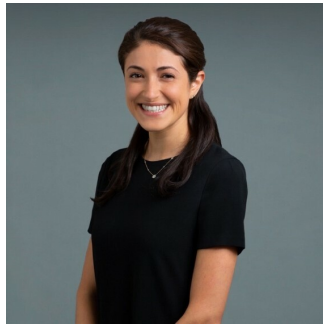

Areas of interest: health disparities in access and outcomes, Centering Pregnancy, advocacy, and medical education

Hobbies: music and creating my own Afro-Caribbean playlists, cooking and learning Haitian and Ghanaian family recipes, exercising, traveling, and discovering new things at Trader Joe's.

Why I chose NYU Langone: I was particularly captured by the mission of Bellevue Hospital, the diversity of the patient population through training at three different hospital centers, and the opportunity for training in CenteringPregnancy at NYU Langone Hospital—Brooklyn. Additionally, the incredibly warm and supportive people that comprise this program.

Third Year Residents

Class of 2025

Jillian Pecoriello, MD

Hometown: Westport, Connecticut

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology and infertility, medical education, and resident wellness

Hobbies: yoga, Pilates, spending time with family and friends, eating chocolate, and watching Friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: I fell in love with NYU Langone's obstetrics–gynecology residency program as a medical student at NYU Grossman School of Medicine, where I got to experience the program's family-feel, amazing and supportive residents, incredible mentors, and endless opportunities. The residency program truly felt like home and I knew I would get the best training here.

Alison Pruzan, MD

Hometown: New York, New York

Medical school: Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology and infertility, oncofertility, general obstetrics, and women's health

Hobbies: Fostering cats, traveling, exercising, binge watching rom-coms, and ice cream

Why I chose NYU Langone: The people. The second I interviewed at NYU Langone I could feel the warmth, the camaraderie, and the remarkable culture of the program. Their enthusiasm for the program was evident and infectious. The combination of Brooklyn, Bellevue, and Tisch creates an unparalleled mix of hospitals, where I can engage with diverse patients and practice equitable care throughout my time in residency.

Maria Smith, MD

Hometown: Eau Claire, Wisconsin

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: healthcare disparities, medical education, advocacy, and environmental sustainability in medicine

Hobbies: camping, running, cross-country skiing, cello, piano, knitting, and arts and crafts

Why I chose NYU Langone: Finding a program with a positive, supportive environment was really important for me, and I knew we had it here at NYU Langone. I think that the close-knit community at NYU Langone really creates the best possible environment to learn and grow as a resident, and also allows our patients to get the best possible care. In New York, we get to see patients with all sorts of different backgrounds and experiences, and learn how to deliver high-quality, evidence-based care to everyone.

Third Year Residents

Class of 2025

Gillian Stein, MD

Hometown: New York, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: general obstetrics, family planning, LGBTQ+ healthcare, and anti-racism in medicine

Hobbies: crossword puzzles, hiking, and singing bad karaoke

Why I chose NYU Langone: The community of residents and faculty that I've had the privilege of working with has not only taught me so much medical knowledge, but also how to be a compassionate communicator, effective teacher, and supportive mentor. They have taught me how to thoughtfully engage with the various systems of oppression in which we live and work. Some of the most impactful conversations I've had in medical school have taken place in the Bellevue gynecology call room. Above all, everyone I've worked with has been kind, welcoming, and supportive.

Fourth Year Residents

Class of 2024

Michelle Bayefsky, MD

Hometown: New York, New York

Medical school: Harvard Medical School

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology and infertility, health policy, and bioethics

Hobbies: sewing, cooking, yoga, hiking, and playing with the pup

Why I chose NYU Langone: On interview day, the people were warm, down to earth, and excited about their work and the populations they got to care for. I'm also thrilled to be home in New York City.

Julia Buldo-Licciardi, MD

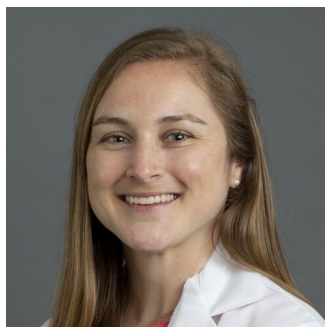

Hometown: River Vale, New Jersey

Medical school: George Washington University School of Medicine and Health Sciences

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology and infertility, bioethics, and medical humanities

Hobbies: skiing, travel, spin, Pilates, cross-stitch, and family and friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: The unparalleled breadth that NYU Langone offers, from public service to translational research, allows residents to serve their communities and explore every professional opportunity without reserve. The fiercely supportive residents, faculty, and administration are behind you every step of the way, and the location is the perfect proximity to my family and friends.

Micaela Cyr, MD

Hometown: Lexington, Massachusetts

Medical school: University of Massachusetts

Areas of interest: general obstetrics and gynecology

Hobbies: running, cycling, and Boston sports team

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU Langone because of the opportunity to train at Bellevue and the diversity of training environments between the different hospitals, strong training in all areas of obstetrics and gynecology, and the overall overwhelmingly positive interactions I had with the faculty and residents in the department.

Fourth Year Residents

Class of 2024

Maria D'Iorio, MD

Hometown: Mineola, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: reading, sewing, yoga, and watching old movie

Hobbies: reading, sewing, yoga, and watching old movies

Why I chose NYU Langone: After attending medical school here, I feel so lucky to be able to stay here for residency. The opportunity to work with the incredibly diverse patient population at Tisch Hospital, NYU Langone Hospital—Brooklyn, and Bellevue is truly unparalleled. The residents and faculty I've worked with during medical school were all incredibly friendly, encouraging, and happy to teach. There's a feeling in this department that both the staff and the residents not only take incredibly good care of their patients but of each other as well.

Logan Hughes-Hogan, MD

Hometown: Eden Prairie, Minnesota

Medical school: Albert Einstein College of Medicine

Areas of interest: Everything. I'm hoping to narrow it down during residency.

Hobbies: running, binge watching Netflix, Packer and Badger football, and traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: For the people. Everyone I interacted with at the resident social and on interview day shared my passion for providing care to a diverse patient population. They also seemed well supported and incredibly happy to be part of the family here.

Shilpa Kalluru, MD

Hometown: Milwaukee, Wisconsin

Medical school: University of Wisconsin School of Medicine and Public Health

Areas of interest: I love everything so far and am undecided about my subspecialty. I am also interested in disparities in sexual and reproductive health and advocating for reproductive justice.

Hobbies: reading, trying to learn new languages, playing the violin, eating at new restaurants, making chai, and hanging out with friends and family

Why I chose NYU Langone: When I was interviewing, I knew I wanted to be at a place that not only had incredible and rigorous training, but that also served a diversity of patients and was invested in the surrounding community. I fell in love with Bellevue and what it stood for—its commitment to the community and every person.

Fourth Year Residents

Class of 2024

Gianina Monestime, MD

Hometown: Mansfield, Massachusetts

Medical school: University of Massachusetts Medical School

Areas of interest: minimally invasive gynecologic surgery, Black maternal mortality and related health disparities, and maternal–fetal medicine

Hobbies: exercising, Netflix and chill, and trying out new restaurants and cocktail bars in my new city

Why I chose NYU Langone: It offers strong generalist training with emphasis on ultrasound, robotic surgical training, and for its fun-loving people.

Antoinette Oot, MD

Hometown: Hollis, New Hampshire

Medical school: Northwestern University Feinberg School of Medicine

Areas of interest: health disparities and healthcare access, urogynecology, maternal–fetal medicine, and education

Hobbies: spending time with friends and family, embroidery and needlepoint, horror movies, bad TV, and eating good food

Why I chose NYU Langone: There are so many reasons. The diversity of training and patient demographics between Bellevue, Tisch Hospital, and NYU Langone Hospital—Brooklyn offer a comprehensive education like you won't see anywhere else. The residents are incredibly close-knit, supportive, brilliant, and fun. And most importantly, the residency administration deeply cares about our wellbeing and makes sure we are able to take care of ourselves and the people we love.

Lindsey Roth, MD

Hometown: Cherry Hill, New Jersey

Medical school: Sidney Kimmel Medical College at Thomas Jefferson University

Areas of interest: maternal–fetal medicine, family planning, and general obstetrics and gynecology

Hobbies: traveling, dancing, anything to do with food and eating, and spending time with family and friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: After attending NYU Langone as a visiting student, I was impressed by the camaraderie and dedication to learning among the residents. The diverse patient population we treat and the ongoing commitment to wellness made it the perfect place for me.

Fourth Year Residents

Class of 2024

Simone Sasse, MD

Hometown: Los Angeles, California

Medical school: Harvard Medical School

Areas of interest: oncology, female pelvic medicine and reconstructive surgery, global health, medical education, and health access

Hobbies: backpacking, running, travel, and reading

Why I chose NYU Langone: It was evident that the community fosters a supportive culture encouraging residents to grow into competent, compassionate physicians caring for a diverse patient population.
