

The NYU School of Medicine
*Statement of Commitment to Graduate Medical Education

New York University School of Medicine affirms its commitment to Graduate Medical Education to provide and maintain the institutional infrastructure including personnel, equipment, facilities and resources necessary to support an appropriate learning environment for its residents and fellows. The School is committed to providing an educational environment which will foster professional and personal development through: 1) organized educational programs; 2) appropriate guidance and supervision for all trainees; 3) outstanding, compassionate and state-of-the-art medical care.

New York University School of Medicine further affirms its commitment to Graduate Medical Education and its intent to adhere to institutional (general) guidelines and specialty (program specific) guidelines established by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education (ACGME). The Dean and Chief Executive Officer of the NYU School of Medicine, The Dean's Office for Graduate Medical Education, the Graduate Medical Education Committee, and the Departmental Chairs will monitor and assure compliance with these guidelines and adherence to these established values.
