A Work-In-Progress: Helping Patients to Deepen the Treatment

Moderator: Stephanie Newman, Ph.D.

Clinical Presenter: Anne Erreich, Ph.D.

Discussant: Stephen Bernstein, M.D.

Monday, February 28, 2005 8:15 p.m.

Einhorn Auditorium, Lenox Hill Hospital, 131 East 76th Street

Senior NYUPI Candidates Drs. Stephanie Newman and Malini Singh have arranged a program of great clinical interest: technical issues that arise in helping patients to become involved in more intensive treatment. Dr. Stephen Bernstein, a Training and Supervising Analyst at the Boston Psychoanalytic Society and Institute, wrote an important paper on this subject over twenty years ago that was remarkably forward-looking for its time, and continues to contribute to this literature. Following introductory remarks by Dr. Newman, Dr. Anne Erreich, a faculty member and Training and Supervising Analyst at NYU Psychoanalytic Institute, will present a case that she is currently developing. This will serve as a focus for discussion by Dr. Bernstein and with the audience.

Recommended readings by Stephen B. Bernstein, M.D: (1983), Treatment Preparatory to Psychoanalysis, Journal of the American Psychoanalytic Association, Vol. 31, pp. 363-390; (1990), Motivation for Psychoanalysis and the Transition from Psychotherapy, Psychoanalytic Inquiry, 10: 21-42; and (2000), Developing a Psychoanalytic Practice, Psychoanalytic Inquiry, 20 (4): 574-593.

This program is free and open to the professional public. RSVPs are not necessary. All are welcome.
