

Department of
Obstetrics and Gynecology

Obstetrics & Gynecology Residents and Alumni

Class of 2029

Joya Ahmad, MD

Hometown: Philadelphia, PA

Undergraduate School: Columbia University

Medical School: SUNY Downstate

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: family planning, menopause, gender-affirming care, and perinatal mental health

Hobbies: distance running, singing, boxing, jiu-jitsu, exploring the city (I'm always looking for a new good restaurant, cocktail bar, or place to go dancing), and of course, hanging out with my cat Pesto

Why I Chose NYU: I was initially drawn to NYU because of the opportunity to train in NYC at three wonderful hospitals (especially Bellevue!!), with incredible breadth and depth of subspecialty exposure and diverse patient populations, but what really solidified my love for the program was the interview and second-look processes where I met and fell in love with the people. I felt such immediate kinship and values alignment with everyone and knew that I would be able to grow into the physician I want to be in this nurturing environment. I am so excited to stay in New York City and continue serving the patients and communities I've loved for so long.

Gabriela Ashenafi, MD

Hometown: San Diego

Undergraduate school: Northwestern University

Medical School: University of Michigan Medical School

Area of Interest in OBGYN: chronic pelvic pain/MIGS, vulvar diseases, anal cancer, reproductive autonomy, sexual health

Hobbies: trying new restaurants and coffee shops and bakeries, watching my comfort tv shows, hanging out with my brother's dog, trolling apartment websites, attending local events (concerts, comedy shows, book tours, movie screenings)

Why I Chose NYU: I knew I wanted to be in New York City for residency to be close to my support system, including my brother, partner, and many of my friends. I also love the city's endless food and cultural offerings! Among the NYC programs, NYU stood out to me for its commitment to service and diversity within its staff and patient population. I was particularly drawn to the opportunity to train at Bellevue, a public safety net hospital, and NYU Brooklyn, which is affiliated with FQHCs, because these are the patient populations that inspired me to become a physician.

Ella Branch, MD

Hometown- Charlotte, NC

Undergraduate School- MIT

Medical School- UNC Chapel Hill

Areas of Interest in OBGYN- Maternal Fetal Medicine, Genetics, Reproductive Justice

Hobbies- running, live music, breweries and parks with my sheepadoodle Busy

Why I Chose NYU- During my interview day, I was blown away by how each person I encountered conveyed authentic enthusiasm for the program's supportive community and exceptional educational opportunities. The program's structure, with training across three distinct clinical settings, offers incomparable experience with diverse patient demographics and comprehensive subspecialty exposure.

Benjamin Grant, MD

Hometown – Charleston, SC

Undergraduate School – Duke University

Medical School – Weill Cornell

Areas of Interest in OBGYN – health equity, AI in medicine, gender affirming care, MIGS

Hobbies – dancing, modeling, singing, cooking, traveling,

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU because of the extraordinary people and the culture of the program. Everyone is deeply committed—not just to their work, but to each other. This culture of support, combined with world-class research opportunities, creates an unparalleled environment for learning and growth. NYU's mission to provide compassionate, high-quality care to all patients, aligns with the kind of physician I aspire to be.

Robyn Lipschultz, MD

Hometown: Minneapolis, MN

Undergraduate School: Johns Hopkins University

Medical School: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: Minimally Invasive Gynecologic Surgery, Reproductive Endocrinology and Infertility, Bioethics, Advocacy

Hobbies: Exploring the NYC restaurant scene, soccer, lacrosse, traveling, rollerblading on the West Side Highway

Why I chose NYU Langone: Attending NYU for medical school allowed me to see first-hand how amazing the department and residents are. My time on the Bellevue gynecologic service inspired me to go into the field of OBGYN because of the team-oriented nature and amazing patient population. I am honored to stay in New York City and serve New Yorkers from all walks of life.

Sabine Pigg, MD

Hometown: Portland, OR

Undergrad: Santa Clara University

Med school: Oregon Health & Science University

Areas of interest: Health equity across the board — queer health, reproductive justice, asylum medicine; & specialty-wise I so far love it all but am especially excited about Gyn Oncology, MIGS, and Pediatric and Adolescent Gyn.

Hobbies: bike commuting, baking, hosting, group chat participation, anything related to movement

Why I chose NYU Langone: On my visiting sub-I at NYU, I was so struck by the warmth and energy of everyone I met — residents, attendings, and staff alike. I immediately felt enveloped into a community of people who show up every day not just committed to but excited about providing excellent, equitable care to every patient and remaining full people while they do it. I also knew I wanted to train in a variety of settings, caring for a diverse patient population and engaging in advocacy both on an individual and a systems level — something the combination of Tisch, Bellevue, and Brooklyn and the program's commitment to health equity makes possible.

Victoria Rabello Kras, MD

Hometown: Porto Alegre, RS, Brazil

Undergraduate School: Western Michigan University

Medical School: University of Maryland School of Medicine

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: global health; healthcare disparities, access, and advocacy; general OBGYN; family planning

Hobbies: Traveling, hiking, swimming, listening to live music, trying new restaurants, wine tasting, outdoor activities, spending time with family and friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: During my gap year, I worked with Saving Mothers, an NGO dedicated to reducing global maternal mortality. Its founder and board member, both at NYU, became my greatest mentors and role models, making NYU an obvious choice. I also wanted to train at a robust academic institution with diverse patient exposure, a strong culture of justice and advocacy, talented and supportive residents and faculty, and a strong global health focus. NYU's training spans three hospitals, providing exceptional experience in both general OB/GYN and its subspecialties, ensuring I am well-prepared to practice in any setting while delivering culturally sensitive, dignified care. I am beyond honored to be training at NYU!

Rishika Reddy, MD

Hometown: Cary, North Carolina

Undergrad: UNC Chapel Hill

Med: UNC School of Medicine

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: global women's health, climate change & maternal health, urogynecology, pediatric & adolescent gynecology

Hobbies: running outdoors, checking out any & all live music, hiking/backpacking near & far, traveling, NYT games

Why I chose NYU Langone: Both during and long after my interview day, the camaraderie between residents and faculty at NYU really stuck with me. Every person I interacted with was incredibly warm, funny, and passionate about the work they were doing, and these conversations spoke to the program's commitment to service without sacrificing resident wellness. Plus, I knew that the opportunity to work across three diverse sites, especially Bellevue Hospital, with supportive mentors, would offer unparalleled clinical training. I am so grateful to be a part of this family!

Anjali Walia, MD

Hometown: Fremont, California

Undergraduate School: Yale University

Medical School: University of California San Francisco (UCSF) School of Medicine

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: gynecologic surgery, narrative medicine, trainee/physician wellness, medical education

Hobbies: Reading in bookstore-cafes, poetry, open mics, crosswording, wine tasting, live music, thrifting with my twin sister, exploring NYC's arts scene, cooking projects (esp. fermenting things!)

Why I chose NYU Langone: From day one of my visiting medical student rotation here, I knew I wanted to join the NYU family. I was blown away by the residents' warmth, camaraderie, and sense of humor. I also knew it would be the honor of my life to serve patients at Bellevue, one of the oldest and largest public hospitals in the US. In addition, I was drawn to the program's unique emphasis on physician wellness and narrative medicine, as well as the opportunity to work with brilliant physician-scientists who are pushing the field of OBGYN forward!

Helen Woolcock Martinez, MD

Hometown: Okemos, Michigan

Undergraduate School: University of Michigan

Medical School: Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: Medical Education, Narrative Medicine, Reproductive Justice & Health Equity, Urogyn, Gender Affirming Care

Hobbies: Climbing, photography, knitting, slow runs, hiking/camping, and lots and lots of walking around NYC!

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU because of the diverse range of experiences that residents have working at different hospitals around NYC and because of the strong sense of community and support between the residents. The NYU OBGYN residents are such a fun-loving group, and it really shows! NYU also has a narrative medicine aspect to their program which makes the program even more special to me, and I think speaks to how thoughtful and creative the NYU family is.

Second Year Residents

Class of 2028

Avni Ahuja, MD

Hometown: Alpharetta, GA

Undergraduate School: University of Georgia

Medical School: Emory University:

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: reproductive justice, medical humanities, global health

Hobbies: Yoga, photography, spending time with friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: The people - both the patient population as well as the program's community. It was important for me to train in a variety of clinical settings and care for a broad range of patient populations, ensuring I developed the skills to provide comprehensive and compassionate care to patients from all walks of life. A large part of that is being able to train at Bellevue, which is such a privilege! After spending my entire life in Georgia, I knew I wanted my residency program to feel like family - and I have found that here. The people at NYU are supportive and incredibly inspiring!

Moses Bibi, MD

Hometown: Atlantic Beach, NY

Undergraduate School: Touro University

Medical School: New York Medical College

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: Chronic Pelvic Pain, Infertility, Gender Affirming Care, Sexual Health

Hobbies: Singing, surfing, musicals, traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU because I wanted the opportunity to learn from some of the best OB/GYNs and specialists in the country while getting to work at three very unique hospitals with very different patient populations. Some of my closest mentors trained in this program, so getting to follow in their footsteps is such an honor!

Colleen Corrado, MD

Hometown: Freehold, NJ

Undergraduate School: St. Bonaventure University

Medical School: New York Medical College

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: Global health, Urogyn, and chronic pelvic pain

Hobbies: knitting, reading, hanging out with co-residents, and playing with my 3 cats!

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU because of the people! The attendings, residents, and support staff have been so welcoming from the beginning of the residency, and I have always felt supported both as a person and a resident! Living in NYC after couples matching with my partner is not so bad either!

Antalya Jano, MD

Hometown: Queens, NY

Undergraduate School: NYU

Medical School: University of Pittsburgh School of Medicine

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: Gynecology Oncology, Reproductive Justice, Health Disparities and Advocacy, Medical Education

Hobbies: running, swimming, film photography, live music, traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: The people, and the opportunity to train at three different sites while working with diverse patient populations! After doing an away rotation, it was evident that the residents and faculty here comprise a close-knit family and are incredibly supportive of one another. I also knew I wanted to serve the various communities in my home city and feel very lucky to be close to my family and friends.

Sonia Khurana, MD

Hometown: Newton, MA

Undergraduate School: Yale University

Medical School: Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai

Areas of Interest: Reproductive health equity, complex family planning, maternal-fetal medicine

Hobbies: Running in Central Park, crossword puzzles, exploring NYC restaurants (with friends!), workout classes, reading, traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: I did an away rotation at NYU and from day 1 was struck by the unmatched culture and people working together to truly support each other in training to become the best OB/GYNs possible. I spent the majority of my rotation at Bellevue, interfacing with patients from every corner of the globe, and knew that this opportunity was one I wanted in part of my residency training. Paired with the exposure of a different hospital structure at NYU, I knew that the three sites would offer the well-rounded training I sought. I have been so grateful to be a part of such an inspiring department, from the leadership to my co-residents, who have motivated me each day to pursue challenging undertakings and become a better person and physician, while feeling supported every step of the way.

Rachel Linfield, MD

Hometown: Hanover, New Hampshire

Undergraduate School: Princeton University

Medical School: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of Interest in OBGYN: Reproductive Justice, Reproductive Endocrinology, Bioethics, Medical Education

Hobbies: Hosting Shabbat dinners, doing the NYT crossword, snuggling with my daughter

Why I chose NYU Langone: I attended NYU for medical school and pursued the three-year pathway in OBGYN. I have appreciated the opportunity to train at all three hospital sites, working with vulnerable patient populations and benefiting from outstanding mentorship. Most importantly, NYU fosters a strong sense of community among residents who support each other through every challenge. This program also creates a welcoming environment for those starting families during their training. I feel so lucky to be here!

Virginie Marchand, MD

Hometown: Paris, France

Undergrad: Duke

Medical school: Duke

Areas of interest in Ob/Gyn: Global women's health, general Ob/Gyn

Hobbies: running, reading, happy hours with my co-interns, planning trips

Why I chose NYU Langone: I wanted to be in NYC and get the best training possible while also being in a kind program. On my interview day, everyone was warm and welcoming, and I could tell that the residents truly cared for and supported one another. I also wanted the opportunity to train in public and private settings, and by working at Bellevue alongside NYU we are able to care for the diverse population of NYC.

Lindsay Marty, MD

Hometown: Granite Bay, CA

Undergraduate School: University of Southern California

Medical School: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of Interest: Perinatal mental health, medical education, reproductive justice, MFM, REI, FP, general OBGYN, a little bit of everything!

Hobbies: Eating through the streets of NYC, hiking, traveling, cooking and baking

Why I chose NYU Langone: Experiencing NYU OBGYN as a medical student solidified my desire to stay for residency—I knew I would be incredibly fortunate to continue my training here. The culture at NYU is truly unparalleled; I work alongside the most supportive, inspiring co-residents and friends, as well as faculty mentors who are approachable and deeply invested in our growth. Training across three diverse clinical sites offers an invaluable breadth of experience, and Bellevue in particular holds a special place in my heart. It is a privilege to be part of a team dedicated to providing compassionate, equitable care for NYC's diverse patient population.

Gemma St. Louis, MD

Hometown: Clinton, New Jersey

Undergraduate School: University of Miami

Medical School: University of Miami Miller School of Medicine

Areas of Interest: Health disparities, reproductive justice, global health

Hobbies: Playing with my dog Ollie, traveling, reading, peloton, spending time with friends and family

Why I chose NYU Langone: During my visiting sub-internship, I first became enamored with NYU where I got to see firsthand the collaborative nature of the residents and faculty. The residents in this program truly love and protect each other! I also knew I wanted to train at a place that has comprehensive training across multiple hospital settings that treats a diverse patient population. NYU's OB/GYN residency program allows us the opportunity to operate with and learn from amazing surgeons, to have the privilege to treat vulnerable populations, and to learn and practice comprehensive abortion care in order to best serve the patients in NYC.

Taylor Thompson, MD

Hometown: Orlando, FL

Undergraduate: Howard University

Medical School: Albert Einstein College of Medicine

Areas of interest in OBGYN: MFM, REI, MIGS

Hobbies: reading, arts and crafts, gaming, exploring new restaurants with friends, travel

Why I chose NYU Langone: NYU provided me the opportunity to work within a community hospital system while also being a part of groundbreaking research. I felt that this institution truly cared about supporting patients at all levels and finding ways to improve the lives of their patients at the same time.

Third Year Residents

Class of 2027

Geidily Beaton Mata, MD

Hometown: Queens, NY

Medical school: CUNY School of Medicine

Areas of interest: Maternal Mortality, Minimally Invasive Surgery and Urogynecology

Hobbies: I enjoy being active whether dancing or going to the gym. I also enjoy planning dates with friends that include convos over brunch, going to see movies at parks, and going to concerts. Netflix is a must on a calm, relaxing day. Lastly, I LOVE blasting Bad Bunny while I clean!

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU because of its diverse exposure to different populations, and hospital systems. I felt that the institution met my needs of treating vulnerable people and benefiting from strong training. The vibrant, caring group of residents who prioritize quality of life is just the icing on the cake!

Amy Bleasdale, MD

Hometown: Portage, Michigan

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: Perinatal Substance Use and Mental Health, Family Planning, Maternal-Fetal-Medicine

Hobbies: singing, cooking, growing my house plant collection, running, listening to live music, and finding new vegan restaurants to try!

Why I chose NYU Langone: As a medical student at NYU, I really admired the department's commitment to education, mentorship, and wellness. Additionally, I deeply respected the advocacy and patient care provided at Bellevue and knew it would be an incredible privilege to continue training there. Moreover, the program offers unparalleled diversity of clinical sites and patient populations, which will help me become a well-rounded generalist. while also giving me the chance to explore subspecialty interests.

Theresa Christensen, MD

Hometown: Princeton, New Jersey

Medical school: Perelman School of Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania

Areas of interest: Family Planning, Reproductive Justice, Bioethics, Health Policy, Gender-Affirming Care

Hobbies: reading, rock climbing, yoga, weightlifting, and time with friends

Why I chose NYU Langone: I chose NYU for its program-wide focus on health equity. I feel so lucky to get to train in a city as diverse as New York, especially at Bellevue which cares for all patients with dignity, respect, and the highest quality of care regardless of their insurance status or country of origin. Additionally, I was impressed on my interview day by the clear culture of support in the residency program, and the dedication to fostering wellness and community while still achieving the highest level of training.

Cody Goldberger, MD

Hometown: New York, New York

Medical school: Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai

Areas of interest: Maternal-Fetal Medicine, Reproductive Justice, Medical Education, and Global Health

Hobbies: reading, knitting, crossword puzzles, seeing Broadway shows, spending time with friends and family?

Why I chose NYU Langone: The people! I could tell immediately that the program fosters a supportive culture comprised of passionate and empathetic residents and faculty. I knew NYU would provide me with comprehensive and robust training spanning three different hospital landscapes, a breadth of clinical experiences, and diverse patient populations. I am honored to serve patients from all three hospitals and thankful for the privilege of receiving my training here.

Hannah Karpel, MD

Hometown: Louisville, Colorado

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: Gynecologic Oncology, Urogynecology, Pediatric and Adolescent Gynecology, advocacy as an OBGYN

Hobbies: hiking, skiing, reading, travel, NYT games

Why I chose NYU Langone: As a medical student here, I had the opportunity to witness the supportive and familial atmosphere of the residency program coupled with incredible and robust training at three hospitals, amazing mentors, and endless opportunities. I was confident that this close-knit environment would be ideal for me to learn, to grow as a resident, and to receive the most comprehensive training.

Victoria Li, MD

Hometown: Santa Clara, California

Medical school: Keck School of Medicine at USC

Areas of interest: maternal-fetal medicine, fetal surgery, pediatric and adolescent gynecology, bioethics, and reproductive justice

Hobbies: cooking and baking, collecting vintage jewelry, starting DIY projects I don't finish, and overwatering my plants

Why I chose NYU Langone: I was first drawn to NYU for the opportunity to train at Bellevue and serve a county population while backed by an academic powerhouse's incredible infrastructure and research. During my visiting sub-internship, I was floored by how much I could learn in this diverse, fast-paced environment and by the enthusiastic support I received from faculty and residents. I am thrilled to train here and fulfill my lifelong dream of living in New York City!

Keizra Mecklai, MD

Hometown: Sacramento, CA

Medical school: Harvard Medical School

Areas of interest: I am undecided, but so far, I love gynecologic surgery, GynOnc, and general OBGYN

Hobbies: Traveling, Thrifting, Dinner Parties (but I delegate cooking to my husband!), going to Broadway shows, Reading, and rewatching 30 Rock

Why I chose NYU Langone: I knew I wanted to be in NY to be closer to my sister and my husband's family. NYU just stole my heart! The residents love and protect each other, making residency not only survivable but also fun. I also knew that training at Bellevue, a hospital dedicated to the health of all people, no matter their backgrounds, would be the privilege of a lifetime. I know that coupling that training with training at Tisch and Brooklyn will make me an unbelievably capable and well-rounded doctor and surgeon.

Amanda Nwaba, MD

Hometown: Woodbine, Maryland

Medical school: University of Miami

Areas of interest: I love it all! MFM & ultrasound, Gynonc, robots(!), advocacy, health education, medical humanities

Hobbies: cooking and baking, anything music related, taking walks and exploring, playing tennis, reading, trying anything crafty

Why I chose NYU Langone: Everyone I spoke to shared a genuine devotion to their patients and community and a passion for their work. It was also important for me to be close to my family and in a city. I look forward to living and working in New York City in a program sincerely committed to resident wellness. NYU also has an extensive, diverse program with a strong sense of community and supportive mentors, and I am so grateful for the opportunity to train here.

Paxton Voigt, MD

Hometown: Darien, CT

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: general practice, global health, reproductive endocrinology and infertility, health disparities, and advocacy

Hobbies: Workout classes, running in Central Park, eating (especially out at restaurants in NYC), hosting dinner parties, hiking (only when the weather is good), and traveling

Why I chose NYU Langone: NYU is where I fell in love with OBGYN because of the people and the patients. The residents are a family that is impossible to not want to be a part of; the attendings and staff are so incredibly supportive and inspirational; and the diversity of patients we get the privilege of caring for together made me confident that I wanted to stay for residency.

Linda Zambrano Guevara, MD

Hometown: Hampton Bays, New York

Medical school: Duke University School of Medicine

Areas of interest: gynecologic surgery, oncology, medical education, health disparities, and advocacy

Hobbies: cycling, cooking, spending time with friends and family

Why I chose NYU Langone: The extraordinary training, range of experiences between hospitals, diverse patient population, and privilege of getting to practice at Bellevue all drew me to NYU Langone. The close, fun-loving, and supportive community sealed the deal.

Fourth Year Residents

Class of 2026

Diana Abbas, MD

Hometown: Cambridge, Massachusetts

Medical school: Boston University School of Medicine

Areas of interest: maternal-fetal medicine, family planning, global health, and medical education

Hobbies: running, swimming, cooking, and yoga

Why I chose NYU Langone: The opportunity to work in three different hospital settings stood out to me. I wanted a place where I could learn to care for everyone in every setting and where I was around people who also wanted the same. It was reassuring on interview day when all residents and faculty talked about how intentionally they chose NYU Langone for this reason. Above all, working with a justice and equity framework is an essential part of the culture of learning and teaching.

Gabrielle Concepcion, MD

Hometown: Bronx, New York

Medical school: Albert Einstein College of Medicine

Areas of interest: maternal-fetal medicine, disparities in healthcare and access to care; I am keeping my options open

Hobbies: baking and eating desserts, making beeswax candles, traveling, trying new things, and spending time with my family, friends, and pets

Why I chose NYU Langone: I was completely swept off my feet during my interview, and for the rest of the week I could not stop thinking about my experience and the interactions I had. I chose NYU Langone because of the diversity of clinical experiences it offers, as well as the privilege of training at Bellevue. I aspired to train at a place where diversity is valued, and there is a strong support system, and I found that here.

Elise Heisler, MD

Hometown: Chicago, Illinois

Medical school: Loyola University Chicago Stritch School of Medicine

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology and infertility, oncofertility, maternal-fetal medicine, and medical education

Hobbies: hiking, traveling/adventuring national parks, tennis, ice cream, making kombucha, and all things dogs

Why I chose NYU Langone: I did an MS4 visiting student rotation here and was taken aback by how friendly, warm, talented, and committed all the residents and faculty were. They immediately made me feel like part of the team, and I knew I wanted to be part of the NYU family. Between Bellevue Hospital, Tisch Hospital, and NYU Langone Hospital-Brooklyn, residents graduate with a breadth of experiences caring for patients who represent the diversity of New York City. I feel so lucky to be part of this wonderful community.

Namita Kansai, MD

Hometown: Vienna, Virginia

Medical school: Duke University School of Medicine

Areas of interest: maternal health disparities, maternal-fetal medicine, family planning, and medical education

Hobbies: traveling, dancing, happy hours, karaoke, all things Bollywood, and cheering on my Blue Devils

Why I chose NYU Langone: It was a no-brainer for me because of the people. Everyone I talked to was so welcoming, happy, and warm. It was exactly the type of family and culture I wanted to join. Learning alongside and from these amazing people while also training at the three diverse and special hospitals so unique to NYU Langone is just a dream come true.

Katie Kwon, MD

Hometown: Ellicott City, Maryland

Medical school: Lewis Katz School of Medicine at Temple University

Areas of interest: gynecologic surgery, medical education, and health disparities and advocacy

Hobbies: exercising, bouldering, brewery and winery tastings, brewing kombucha, new restaurants, anything food/beverage related brings me joy

Why I chose NYU Langone: When I was pre-med, I volunteered at Bellevue and have dreamt of serving this population ever since. NYU Langone provides the opportunity to train at Bellevue, Tisch, and NYU Langone-Brooklyn, one of the most diverse training opportunities I have encountered. It was vital for me to work with different patient populations. The support I received from the faculty and the opportunities for career development made choosing NYU one of the easiest decisions to make.

Dominique Noriega, MD

Hometown: Manchester, Massachusetts

Medical school: SUNY Downstate Health Sciences University

Areas of interest: everything, particularly human rights via health equity, reproductive justice, and medical education

Hobbies: reading, rock climbing, and crocheting

Why I chose NYU Langone: In a residency program, I was looking for clinical and academic rigor within a supportive culture as well as an opportunity to better understand the healthcare structures in New York City. I found all that and more at NYU Langone. I was beyond impressed by the breadth and depth of training at the three different sites, especially the opportunity to serve the diverse patient population at Bellevue alongside such warm and inspiring colleagues.

Alexandra Pass, MD

Hometown: Bronxville, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: everything-I am excited to continue to explore the full breadth of this amazing field during residency.

Hobbies: listening to podcasts, cycling on my indoor bike, walking around Central Park, exploring new restaurants with family and friends, and traveling whenever and wherever I can

Why I chose NYU Langone: Early on, I knew that the Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology was special. I was able to witness firsthand the true sense of camaraderie between residents, the devoted mentorship from faculty, and the unmatched training experience afforded by practicing at three unique institutions: Bellevue, Tisch Hospital, and NYU Langone Hospital-Brooklyn. I am honored to train among individuals who I admire.

Tatiana Petrovick, MD

Hometown: Barre, Massachusetts

Medical school: University of Massachusetts

Areas of interest: global health, family planning, and ultrasound

Hobbies: reading sci-fi and fantasy books, fitness, thrift shopping, and trying new cheeses

Why I chose NYU Langone: From the very beginning of my residency application process, I knew that NYU Langone checked all my boxes: an academic program with strong research, faculty committed to health equity and working with medically underserved populations. When I interviewed here, it was clear that everyone was passionate about what they do. I chose NYU Langone because I want to work with the culturally and socioeconomically diverse patient population at Bellevue and start my medical career in a place that supports me personally and professionally.

Cibél Quinteros, MD

Hometown: Santa Cruz, California

Medical school: Columbia University Vagelos College of Physicians and Surgeons

Areas of interest: general obstetrics and gynecology, family planning, and global health

Hobbies: biking, traveling, painting, ceramics, and yoga

Why I chose NYU Langone: It provided the perfect combination of robust training in a supportive environment. The different hospitals offered the opportunity to treat and learn from many different patient demographics. The residents and faculty are welcoming and dedicated to supporting each other and providing fantastic patient care.

Jenna Reich, MD

Hometown: Westchester, New York

Medical school: NYU Grossman School of Medicine

Areas of interest: reproductive endocrinology, assisted reproductive technology, and adolescent health

Hobbies: spending time with family and friends, walking my dog Maggie in Central Park, Pilates, and vanilla soft-serve ice cream

Why I chose NYU Langone: Having gone here for medical school, I knew what a supportive environment NYU Langone would provide. The familial atmosphere and positive interactions with the residents and attendings I had gotten to know really stood out and made me confident that I would feel comfortable and confident in this learning environment. I also love working in Bellevue and think that the experience is truly unique within New York City.
